AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has demonstrated its power of cure for all diseases of the blood.

The Harpooner's Story.

New Bedford, June 1, 1883.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Twenty years ago I was a harpooner in the North Pacific, when five others of the crew and myself were laid up with scurvy. Our bodies were bloated, gums swollen and bleeding, teeth loose, purple blotches all over us, and our breath seemed rotten. Take it by and large we were pretty badly off. All our lime-juice was accidentally destroyed, but the captain had a couple dozen bottles of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and gave us that. We recovered on it quicker than I have ever seen men brought about by any other treatment for Scurvy, and I've seen a good deal of it. Seeing no mention in your Almanac of your Sarsaparilla being good for scurvy, I thought you ought to know of this, and so send you the facts.

Respectfully yours, RALPH Y. WINGATE.

The Trooper's Experience.

Maseru, Basutoland (S. Africa,) March 7, 1883.

DR. J. C. AYER & CO.—Gentlemen: I have much pleasure to testify to the great value of your Sarsaparilla. We have been stationed here for over two years, during which time we had to live in tents. Being under canvas for such a time brought on what is called in this country "veldt-sores." I had those sores for some time. I was advised to take your Sarsaparilla, two bottles of which made my sores disappear rapidly, and I am now quite well.

Yours truly, T. E. BODEN,
Trooper, Cape Mounted Riflemen.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

POSITIVE PROOFS.

In other advertisements we have said that the Russian Rheumatism Cure was a specific for Rheumatism, and all its attendant aches and pains. These are simply Plain Facts. We now present some Positive Proofs:

Could one ask anything more to the point than this from MR. H. EMANUEL, a prominent merchant of Brookfield, Mo., who writes Feb. 26, '86:

"When in Europe, two years ago, I tried hard to buy the receipt of this very remedy. I also told Col. Theobold to get it for me at almost any price; but neither of us succeeded. I, myself, suffered with Rheumatism for years and spent hundreds of dollars, but never got any permanent relief until I tried this. Since then, (over two years now) I have not suffered the least. I know it is a good thing. It will take like wildfire. Now I want the agency for five States."

Here is another from nearer home. MR. J. D. WHITE is a leading business man of Bloomsburg, Pa. His grandfather, over 80 years old, has been a great sufferer from Rheumatism. Nov. 24, 1885, MR. WHITE writes us:

"Have read your circular. The country is so full of patent humbugs it is hard to make people believe any remedy has merit until it is tried. My grandfather is such a sufferer that he would gladly give for a single day's relief, ten times your price for a cure. He will try it anyway, because he don't think your house would keep anything without merit."

Dec. 21, he says: "My grandfather pronounces the Russian Rheumatism Cure a first-class success. He is not relieved one day only, but altogether."

If you doubt either of these statements, write the parties; they'll gladly answer any inquiry. Our space does not permit further testimony. We have plenty of it, however. It makes quite a little book. We send it free to all who ask.

WHAT SAYS THE CLOCK?

What says the clock when it strikes one?
"Watch," says the clock," "O, watch, little one!"

What says the clock when it strikes two?
"Love God, little one, for God loves you!"

Tell me softly what it whispers at three,
It is, "Suffer little children to come unto me."

Then, come, gentle lambs, and wonder no more,
'Tis the voice of the Shepherd that calls you at four.

And oh, let your young hearts gladly revive
When it echoes so sweetly, "God bless you!" at five.

And remember at six that the fading of day,
That "your life is a vapor that passeth away."

And what says the clock when it strikes seven?
"Of such is the kingdom, the kingdom of heaven."

And what says the clock when it strikes eight?
"Strive, strive to enter in at the beautiful gate!"

And louder, still louder it calls you at nine,
"My son give me that heart of thine!"

And such be the voices responsive at ten,
"Hosanna in the highest, hosanna, amen!"

And loud let your voices ring at eleven,
"Of such is the kingdom, the kingdom of heaven."

When the deep strokes at midnight the watchword shall ring,
"Lo, these are my jewels, these, these saith the King!"

ONLY A LITTLE THING.

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

"Pictures! Pictures!"

Four little girls were on their way to a photograph gallery to have their pictures taken. It was easy to see that it was something of an event to them. Every bow and ruffle and looping was nicely arranged, their pretty hair braided with great exactness, and each little lassie moved with due regard to keeping such an amount of elegance undisturbed.

"I'm afraid this wind is going to blow our hair all rough," said Madge.

"They always have a brush and comb there," said Ollie, with a superior remembrance of having had a picture taken very long ago.

"I know I shall laugh," said Jessie.

"You mustn't," said Madge, very positively. "Of all things in the world I do hate to see a smirk on a photograph."

"You must try to think of something solemn," said Ollie. "That's the way I always do."

"I shall be scared, I know," said Little Kitty.

"Then you'd better think of something funny," said Ollie. "We must look exactly as we always do, or it won't look natural. Cheerful, you know."

Then there was a pause, during which each little girl tried to fix her face exactly as it always was, in doing so managing to look as unlike herself as possible.

"How shall we fix our hands?"

"Oh, the man will fix them the right way," said Ollie. "And our heads, too; they are screwed up in a queer kind of a thing to keep them still."

Kitty felt still more sure of being scared, and her face took on a doleful look which promised poorly for a cheerful picture.

The day was the first bright one after a number of cloudy ones, and they found several sitters before them. Others followed, as they waited for an hour or more, among them a boy, a queer, awkward-looking fellow, they thought, very bashful and ill at ease. He fidgeted and fussed as if waiting was very hard work for him, and at last spoke a few words to the busy artist, who turned to those who waited for a sitting, and said:

"Here is a young gentleman who wants his picture taken and cannot wait. Is any one willing to give up their sitting to him and wait longer?"

No one seemed ready to do so. A farmer who had his family there said something about its being hard for him to get them all into town, and one or two others spoke of their time being valuable. So the man beckoned to Madge, and she went to take her place behind the screen, saying to her sisters. "Of course we couldn't wait."

"No, indeed," said Ollie, "we can only come on Saturday, and, as we're going to spend the day with Aunt Annie, it would make us too late."

"But I am sorry for that poor boy," said Jessie, looking toward him as he prepared to go. "He seems to feel so badly about it. Look! there are tears in his eyes."

"Pooh! Such a great fellow to cry about a little thing like that! Look, Jessie, the man wants you next."

But Jessie remembered some things she had heard about Christ's little ones denying themselves in order to do a kindness to others. The four had looked forward for some time to this thing of having their pictures taken. It would be something of a trial to wait. But she felt sure the boy must have some much more serious reason for desiring haste. So, when Ollie gave her a little push, she called to him, as he was going out of the door: "Stop! You can take my turn."

"Jessie, what do you mean?" said Ollie, impatiently, as the boy, with a very bright look of gratitude toward her, went in to take his sitting. "Don't you know you can't have your picture taken till next Saturday?"

"Yes, I know it, but never mind."

"And after Bridget took such trouble doing up our best dresses!" said Madge.

"And yours won't be nice and fresh then," said Ollie.

Jessie could not help feeling that the sacrifice was a serious one, but in a few minutes the boy came to her and spoke a word or two of thanks so very earnestly, and in a manner so much more gentlemanly than might have been expected from one so bashful looking that she did not regret what she had done.

Ollie and Kitty took their turns, and then the little party went on to Aunt Annie's.

"Oh, Aunt Annie," said Madge, "we've all had our pictures taken"—"except Jessie," interrupted Ollie—"And she might just as well as not only there was a boy who wanted his taken first, and Jessie gave him her turn."

"And next week we shall send you all our pictures except Jessie's and we don't know when she can have her's taken now."

"But the boy wanted his so badly," said poor little Jessie in an appealing tone, quite overcome at being found so much fault with.

Aunt Annie asked a few questions about it, and then drew Jessie very tenderly to her side. "I am sure," she said, "that when I do get Jessie's picture, it will be the face of a dear, unselfish little girl, who has the true Christ-like spirit of pleasing others before herself."

And Jessie was fully comforted.

Winter, spring, summer, nearly a year had passed when our four little girls found themselves at a picnic, at which nearly all the members of a large church and Sunday school were gathered, besides a few strangers.

"I wonder who that boy is," said Madge. "I'm sure I have seen him before, but I can't remember where."

"So have I," said Ollie, "and he's been looking over this way as if he knew us."

"Look," said Jessie, "he's coming this way. Ah—I know who he is!"

The boy came near with a very sweet-faced lady, who took Jessie's hand and looked into her face.

"Edward tells me that this is the little girl who gave up her turn at the photographer's last summer in order to let him have a likeness taken first. I have a message for you."

"For me?" Jessie looked up with a wondering smile.

The boy, as if feeling that some sort of an introduction was expected of him, managed to say, "This is my Aunt—Mrs. Vernon."

"Let us sit down on the grass," said Mrs. Vernon, "while I tell you why Edward was in such a hurry that day. His father is a missionary on a South Sea island, many, many thousand miles away. Edward had just arrived in this country, having been sent here to be educated. He left his mother in poor health, and one of her latest requests to him was that he should send her his likeness as soon as possible.

"On the day he met you he was on his way to us, under appointment to meet us at a country railroad station a long way from here. It was his only chance to secure a picture, and he knew that if it was not sent by a vessel which was to sail soon, there might be no other opportunity for months, for no regular line touches at their island. But, thanks to you, the pictures were finished and sent to us from the artist in time, and reached that far-off shore to be an unspeakable comfort to his mother before she died."

A lump came into Jessie's throat, as she thought of that poor mother longing for a sight of the face of her boy.

"I sent a letter with the pictures, continued Mrs. Vernon, "telling her how it had been obtained through the kindness of a little girl whose name, even, we did not know. And she sent a message of love and thanks to you, and this little thing which she wished you to keep as a reminder of the great happiness you secured to others by an act of self-denial."

"But it was such a little thing!" said Jessie.

"Almost all the kindness in the world comes in little things, dear. Very few of us have opportunity for doing great things, but little kindnesses are the blessings of every hour."

She was unwrapping a small box, from which she took a little curiously carved and polished bracelet which she clasped on Jessie's arm, saying: "It is the work of the natives of the island, and is a curiosity in this country. Edward has always felt sure he would see you again, and has watched for you ever since we came here on a visit."

"Oh, dear, I'm so glad I did it!" said Jessie, with tears in her eyes. "And so glad I know. I wish we could always know how it comes out when we try to do right."

"We cannot always know, dear child. The great Master who orders the smallest thing in our lives in highest wisdom tenderest love, in many cases does not permit us here to know the blessing we may have worked. But we can always be sure that no act of loving kindness fails to do its full share in making the world sweeter and brighter and better."

"More like heaven," whispered little Jessie to herself.

Train Talk.

Five or six drummers sat in the smoking saloon of a sleeper telling stories over their cigars. The cigars were good and the stories funny. But over in the corner sat a little drummer who hadn't told a story. He had been skipped every time. This was finally noticed, and they all pressed him for a contribution to the merriment.

"Boys," he said, "I never told a story in my life, I can't remember stories, and I couldn't tell one if I could remember it. Besides, I think we've had enough funny stories to-night. At least, if I tell one at all, there'll be nothing funny about it. It isn't so much a story as a little incident of life—a little tragedy—that came under my observation. The last time I was in Chicago I went down on State street with some friends, just out of curiosity. We went into the lowest saloons because we wanted to see that phase of society. One of these places I remember well. It was way down low. Behind the bar was a villainous looking fellow, and he dealt out that kind of whiskey that brings tears to your eyes when you drink it. While we were there a man came in who was evidently going to wreck. He was nearly drunk. He wore good clothes, but they were soiled and torn. His handsome face was smeared with dirt and his splendid eyes were bloodshot. He looked around at us and remarked:

"I say, fellows, I'm havin' a good time. Makin' a night of it, y' know, sev'l nights, in fac'. Here, gen'lemen, is the las' dollar I've got in the world. N' I do shay it myself at home I've got the nicest little wife 'n 'er lan', an' the prettiest, sweetes' little b-boy. I-I won'r 'f he wanted to kiss papa good night 'fore he went to bed to-night. Gen'lemen, this is my las' dollar. But let 'er go. Let 'er go's she lays on the bar here. I'll shleep out 'r go t' the shtashun house. Gen'lemen, will you take a drink with me?"

"Boys," continued the narrator, as he lowered his voice and glanced at his listeners, "in two minutes there wasn't a dry eye in that saloon."

A Clever Confidence Couple.

A beautiful girl, with large blue eyes and golden hair, but shabbily dressed, greatly interested a large crowd of gentlemen on one of the East river ferry boats the other day by singing very sweetly and tenderly the well-known hymn, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul." As she concluded one verse, a large, well-dressed man called a deck hand and ordered him to put her out of the cabin. She looked despairingly and burst into tears. There were cries of "Throw him overboard," "Let her alone," "Shame!" The large man, who looked like a railroad president, insisted; said that the deck hand was doing his duty, and that the ferry company had ordered all nuisances suppressed. He acknowledged that he had complained of her. The murmurs of discontent and anger arose around him, at which he seemed somewhat disconcerted and, approaching the girl, said: "What's the matter, sissy?"

Then she told her pitiful story of a sick mother, a dead father, no work, hunger, distress, and her anxiety to get employment. "Oh, don't send me to prison," she cried, breaking completely down. The large man was abashed, and the crowd looked angry and scornful again. He at once apologized, and to show his regret for his blunder, immediately took out a $5 bill, which he dropped into his hat. Then he passed the hat, which was soon filled with money. After the passengers had left the boat, he joined the girl and they both went off together. He was a well-known clever confidence man, and the young woman was his wife, as clever as he.—[New York letter.

Dickens' Mother.

Charles Dickens inherited from his mother a keen appreciation of the droll and of the pathetic, as also considerable dramatic talent. She is described as a little woman who had been very nice-looking in her youth, having bright hazel eyes, and being a thoroughly good-natured, companionable body. She possessed an extraordinary sense of the ludicrous, and her power of imitation was something astonishing. On entering a room she almost unconsciously took an inventory of its contents, and if anything happened to strike her as out of place or ridiculous, she would afterward describe it in the quaintest possible manner. In like manner she noted the personal peculiarities of her friends and acquaintances.

ABOUT A SCHOOL TEACHER.

The Interesting Time he Had in Michigan.

"Yes, I've been up in Northern Michigan teaching school all winter," said a South-bound passenger with long scars on his face, "but I haven't had much fun. It's a tough job, and I don't think I'll go back again. I know when I have enough. The boys up there are a bad lot. I thought I could handle 'em, but the very first day when I stood 'em up in a row for a lesson in spellin' something astonishing happened. Little streams of black stuff began to come down on me from the direction of the ceiling. On making an investigation I found it was ink, but for a long time I couldn't tell where it came from. Soon I was black and stained from head to foot and the spelling book which I held in my hand was so daubed up I could hardly read a word out of it. Where do you suppose those streams came from? From little holes about as big as a pin bored between the incisors of those boys. They would take a mouthful of ink, put on the pressure with their tongues and cheeks and shoot out a stream that would fly thirty feet as straight as a die. They broke up that spelling lesson, and the worst of it was I couldn't get back at them, because I never could tell which boy was the offender. Those chaps had bored those holes on purpose and they had more fun than you can shake a stick at. But it was rough on me. After having my complexion and four suits of clothes spoiled I got mad and attempted to thrash every boy who had ink-stains on his lips. That was where I got these scars. How? Why, from finger nails. The boys had let their nails grow an inch long, turned them under into claws, and sharpened the ends to a point. They would scratch like wild cats with 'em, and it is a wonder I got off with my life. But I did, and taught that school through the whole term, just the same. How? By wearing a sheet-iron mask over my face and a gum-coat on my back, carrying two revolvers in my belt, and keeping a constable in the ante-room. Don't think I'll take the job next winter though. I'm no hog."—[Chicago Herald.

CATHERINE COLE AND JUMBO.

The Elephant Lifts Her Up by Her Bustle and Wrecks It.

Catherine Cole, one of the best known literary women of the South, tells this experience with the lamented Jumbo.

"The worst fright I ever got in my life was from Jumbo. I was in England and visited the Zoological Gardens frequently. That was before Jumbo became noted for having the 'moost,' as the Mahouts call it—bad temper in England. One fine day I attired myself in a new dress with an exceedingly large bustle, as was the style then, and in my rounds dropped in at the Zoo.

"I was walking around the garden when suddenly I felt myself lifted like a feather into the air. I tried to scream, but I could not, I didn't have the time. The power that raised me aloft had me by the bustle, and I could hear that frail protuberance crushing together as if a mountain had mashed it. Then I described a semi-circle and was let down, bustle and all on the walk. I heard a shout of merry childish voices and Jumbo passed with twenty or thirty children on his back. It seems that I was just in front of him and quick as thought he seized me by the bustle of my dress and carefully lifted me to one side. His gentle squeeze of my bustle broke it into a useless wreck, and I lost five pounds of flesh from concentrated fright. I took me an hour to realize exactly what had happened and take an inventory of the smash-up. I never went back to the Zoo any more. I am now as a Texas cowboy is about Indians. He likes them better dead. So do I elephants. I always bustle to get away from these mastodons when I see them coming."

Rules of Free Action.

"Girls are beginning to realize more and more that a life of independence is not to be thrown aside. The number who now relinquish good situations to marry is growing small." One of our contributors, Royallieu, seems to fear that the condition pictured above is a dangerous one daily growing more common. He has little more, I am convinced, to dread in this direction than that men likewise may forget to take their meals at regular intervals. Surely one who has seen the tenderness of even a frivolous girl, as she croons over a baby, singing to it little lullabys and caressing it so tenderly, could never fear that the maternal instinct could be crushed by the love of gain. I too am a suffragist and appreciate fully the glorious opportunities which this free age opens to women, and yet I feel sure that it will be not less but more true in the future that the majority of women will care more to be good mothers than to be powerful or to win the prizes of wealth or honor. Women will not so readily marry as opportunity offers, but matrimony will become a more noble and sacred relation and motherhood will be a truer and grander responsibility, assumed, as it should be, with deep earnestness and holier and more enduring love. She who writes with a naturally strong moral instinct and deep affections, a broader judgment and keener insight, cannot but take up all relations of life with a surer and more steady hold; and her offspring will in turn give place to another yet more true and faithful. Surely in the more spiritual and better sense, "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world," and she who could mother this world might help to save it. Every good woman, then, as well as every true man, will join in the prayer, "God bless the mothers!"—[Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Anecdote of Emerson.

A pleasant story of Ralph Waldo Emerson runs to the effect that, when Mr. Emerson was traveling in Egypt with his daughter, they met an Englishman who did all in his power to make it pleasant for them, and when the time came for their separation, said: "You may wonder, sir, at my having overstepped my usual reserve so far as to become so intimate with you: but it is for the sake of a countryman of yours, one bearing the same name—Emerson—Ralph Waldo Emerson. He has done me much good and I hope some time to cross the ocean to meet him." And Mr. Emerson never told him it was he himself whom he sought.

The Prevailing Color.

The Art Amateur, discussing the famous peach-blow vase, it being of the opinion that it was worth nothing like the immense sum it brought at the sale, says: "It is certainly curious that not one of the numerous French writers on Oriental porcelain from Jacquemart to Gonse, tells us of the rarity of this interesting product of the potter nor do I find mention of anything suggesting 'peach-blow' or 'crushed strawberry,' as it is also called, in Julien's translation of an exhaustive work on Chinese porcelains."

The number of men, rank and file in the United States army is limited to 25,000. The exact numbers can be ascertained by writing to the Secretary of War or by consulting the last annual report of the commanding general.

THE LITTLE GIRL OF GETTYSBURG.*

'Twas Gettysburg's last day.
The dead and wounded lay
On trampled fields and ridges battle-torn,
Among the outer posts,
Around the guarded hosts,
Rode Hancock, watchful, on the fated morn.

And lo! a little child,
With eyes and tresses wild
Close to the lines had strayed, and met him there,
And tightly to her breast
A heavy load she prest—
A musket!—all her slender strength could bear.

"My brave and pretty dear,
Tell me how came you here
Upon the field, before the fight is done?"
Then, at her lisped reply,
Tears dimmed the General's eye;
"My papa's dead, but here's my papa's gun."

*An actual incident, related by General Hancock.

RECOGNIZED.

I stopped into my room one day,
And saw some children there at play;
I sought my little girl, and found her
With half a dozen youngsters round her,
And, from the way she slapped the rule,
I knew that they were "playing school."

I gave my little girl a kiss—
A pleasure that I never miss;

A murmur through the schoolroom ran,
A smile pervaded every feature—
"He must be a committee-man!"
They loud exclaimed—"he kissed the teacher!"

A SPICY LETTER.

A Reply on the Subject of the Disenchantment of Marriage.

The following extracts are from a bright letter written by a lady reader to the New York World in reply to a correspondent, J. R. B., who attributes the "disillusionments of married life" solely to the negligence and lack of interest shown by the wife:

"Now, I have never seen a man who would not prefer the morning paper to the society of his wife. She may sit at the head of the table dressed in the daintiest and most tasteful of gowns, serving a well ordered breakfast on hand-painted china, she may be bright, cheery, even intelligent—and wives are sometimes intelligent. The husband will take the breakfast and the morning paper, and there will be nothing left for the poor wife to do but to gaze out of the window. I have seen women at the head of their tables making the most frantic attempts to draw their husband's attention from the newspaper. I have seen them resort to all the arts of playfulness and coquetry, and finally, as a last and desperate resort, come out with the matter of fact question, 'What's the news, John?' 'Oh! nothing, nothing,' and yet it took him the entire breakfast time to read 'nothing.' I am inclined to think that the newspaper is largely responsible for much of the marital misery in the world, for what woman of ordinary attractions can compete with a live journal?

J. R. B. tells us that a husband is always drawing contrasts between his wife as she is and as she was. Moreover, that he is always drawing contrasts between his wife and other women. This is just where a great deal of the marital unhappiness comes in. There is too much of this thing going on all the time. A man, for example, goes by invitation to call upon a gentleman friend. The lady of the house has been apprised of his coming. She is dressed becomingly for the occasion, and makes herself agreeable, of course. A pleasant impression is made upon the visitor, and he goes home and for the next week casts it up to his poor little wife, who perhaps is worried and nervous over a teething baby, an inefficient servant or no servant at all, that he does not know how it is, but Jones' wife always looks well dressed, and the domestic machinery of their home seems to move on without a clog or jar. It seems to be the nature of the average man to admire any other man's wife more than he does his own—that is, after the brief period of the 'honeymoon' has past. I have a friend who is a fine amateur musician. She plays in excellent taste and with much sentiment and feeling classic music, all the gems from the operas, as well as the higher composers. She makes her home bright with her presence and cheerful with accomplishments. One evening her husband went to call upon the aforesaid Jones, and upon his return he told her that Jones' wife played such a beautiful piece for him, that it was the loveliest thing he had ever heard, and that he wanted her to get it and learn it right away. She asked him what it was and he said, 'Silvery Waves.' That piece was gray and toothless almost before she was born.

"I know a gentleman who is always criticising his wife's dress, particularly her hats and bonnets. She is a lady of refined and modest tastes and quite elegant in appearance. She recently purchased a winter hat, black velvet of stylish shape trimmed with white wings, a most delicate and tasteful combination, becoming to her style of face and appropriate to any of her costumes. She showed it to her husband, who viewed it 'with a critic's eye' and pronounced it the ugliest thing he had ever seen, and said if she was going to wear 'that thing' out she should not go with him. A few days after she sent the hat to a friend, explaining the situation and asking her to wear it over to her house in the evening when her husband would be at home. The lady did so, and after she had gone the husband turned to his wife and said: 'There now, if you had gotten a hat something like that you would have shown much better taste and judgment.' So runs the world.

"As to the question of dress, women should be neat about their personal appearance. They can be neat even if they cannot be fine, but as to a woman's preserving at all times a captivating ideality I claim that it is simply impossible. There is too much 'high art' about for me. Your correspondent ought to know that there is not much ideality about wrestling with the kitchen fire in the morning. A woman cannot make the struggle in an æsthetic gown. She cannot always be neat at such times, because the kindling-wood will fly up in her face, and the soot blacken her dainty hands and apron. These things will happen in the best regulated families.' Every woman without an income of her own is a pauper. This is a strong word to use, but it is the only word that covers the ground. Many a woman goes without dainty little trifles of dress rather than ask for the wherewithal to get them. I have always thought it a degradation put upon woman to have to ask for everything she wants.

"And now to the other side of the 'disillusionment' business. Our friend says nothing about the husband's throwing off his disguises. A woman likes an ideal husband just as well as a husband admires an ideal wife. A man in his shirt sleeves and without collar is not an object of admiration, any more than a wife en deshabille is to her husband.

"It seems to be a common failing of the gentlemen after they have been married a little while too discard all the little courtesies which they had been wont to show their wives before marriage. Then 'please' and 'thank you' is forgotten. When I go to a place of amusement and see a lady and gentleman together I can tell in almost every instance whether they are man and wife. If the lady drops her program or handkerchief and has to stoop and pick it up herself, I say she is that man's wife. On the contrary, if the gentleman is kind and polite to her, careful about draughts, etc., I say they are not married.

"We hear a great deal of talk about the trials and cares of a man in business. They have to battle with the world it is true and labor for our support, but women are the homekeepers, and the little trials and cares which come up every hour in housekeeping are just as hard for them to bear as a man's office or shop duties are to him. To keep a house well is no play business. I would like to see a woman wrestle with the servant girl question and preserve her 'ideality.' This will cause the roses to [illegible] in her cheek quicker than anything I [illegible] of.

"Now, I believe in marriage. I believe that there are a great many good and noble men in the world, and that there will be [illegible] angels in heaven. There are men who rise at night to administer soothing syrup to the baby, and who struggle with the kitchen fire in the morning. On the other hand there are idle, silly, selfish, extravagant wives, women who whine when their husbands bring them an orange instead of an apple, or vice versa, and yet it does seem to me as if these kind of women receive more adulation from the men than the kind, cheery, helpful wives we so often see. I claim that women are not any more to blame, and not as much to blame, for the 'disenchantment' of married life than their husbands are. Women are by nature more unselfish, more sensitive, truer and kinder than men are. Their duties are more varied and more wearing. They endure greater suffering, have more strain upon their nervous system and bear up under adversities which a man often shoots himself in the head to get rid of. They need more sympathy and tenderer care than a man does, and I am sorry to say they do not always receive it."

RAILROADING IN RUSSIA.

The Straightest Road in the World Built to the Order of the Czar.

At the time of the Crimean war, Russia had in all its vast empire in Europe less than 800 miles of railway. Now it has more than 18,000. If it had had 18,000 miles of railway then, the Crimean war would either have been terminated by the defeat of the Allies, or it would have continued as many years as it did months before Russia could have been forced to surrender. For it was then compelled to convey its troops and everything necessary for their support, as well as most of the munitions of war, immense distances by the slowest and rudest means of transportation. Of that less than 800 miles of railway more than 400 constituted the line connecting St. Petersburgh, the modern, with Moscow, the ancient and genuine, Russian capital. At the present there are through connections by first-class carriages all the way from St. Petersburgh to Berlin and from Moscow to central Europe. Indeed, one could go thus to Sebastopol, Odessa and to the southern extremity of the empire.

The carriages on these lines are as good as in any part of Europe, though the speed is not very great. On many of the roads 15 to 18 miles an hour is the average, and 30 miles the highest attainment of express lines. The companies can generally be relied upon to comply with the schedule. Stations along the line are numerous and the stops are frequent, and a liberal supply of good food and tea, unsurpassed in the world, can be obtained at the buffets on the principal lines. A traveler, in defending the slowness of speed, says: "The English and Americans must remember that Russians are rarely in a hurry, and like to have frequent opportunities of eating and drinking. In Russia time is not money; if it were, every subject of the czar would have a large stock of ready money on hand, and would often have great difficulty in spending it."

The railway from St. Petersburgh to Moscow is probably the straightest line in the world. It has been built as the crow flies, pays no attention to towns, and sets out the passengers who are going to particular places at railway stations surrounded by fields. On inquiry the unfortunate wight finds that the station may be several miles from the town, which he must reach on foot, in wagons or stages, according to the accommodations. The explanation of this peculiarity is of considerable historic interest, and reflects much light on the arbitrary methods prevailing in Russia. The only reason why this railroad ignores every town between St. Petersburgh and Moscow, except one small place called Tver, which happened to be near the straight line, is that "the czar so ordered it." Here is the history: When the preliminary survey was being made, Nicholas, learning that the officers intrusted with the task—and the minister of ways and roads in the number—were being influenced by personal rather than by technical considerations, determined to cut the Gordian knot in a true imperial style. When the minister laid before him the map with the intention of explaining the intended route, he took a ruler and drew a straight line from one terminus to the other, and remarked in a tone that precluded all discussion, "You will construct the line so." This used to be ridiculed, and cited to show the evils of a despotic form of government, but public opinion has undergone a change. It is considered that great advantages occur to Russians, as a whole, through the shortness of this line, and that though the towns have suffered a great deal, the construction of branch lines to such as need them will, in the end, remedy the difficulty, while the great benefits of being able to carry by far the greater part of the goods and passengers that go the whole length of the line in a shorter time will remain.—[Christian Advocate.

Wouldn't Meddle with the Weather.

A communication was received from Professor Wagonman, prophet and predicter offering to furnish the Lime Kiln Club with a spring two weeks earlier than usual in consideration of the small sum of $5. The Professor is a resident of St. Louis, and has predicted more dark nights during the watermelon season than any other man in America.

Givendam Jones moved that his offer be accepted. He was getting tired of his chilblains and sighed for a rest.

Trustee Pullback hoped the motion would prevail. If he couldn't go barefoot two weeks earlier than usual this year he would have to sit in the house.

"De offer will be succinctly declined," replied the president. "I am not only agin foolin' wid de weather, but if de white folks can stand it we shouldn't let on dat it hurts us."—[Detroit Free Press.

He Relieved the Patient.

A very wealthy man in Berlin, a victim of the gout, and unable to quit his easy chair, received the other morning the visit of a man who walked straight into the room saying:—"I am a specialist in cases of gout, and have effected the most marvelous cures by a simple remedy. Are you very bad?" "Sir, I am quite unable to put my foot down." "What, even in your room?" "I cannot stir from the spot." "That is very sad. Have you a servant who could take a prescription to the chemist's?" "Yes, but I have just sent him on an errand." The doctor appeared to reflect a moment or two; then snatching up the watch, purse and other valuables belonging to the patient he made for the door, saying as he went:—"Ta, ta! Hope you'll soon recover; at any rate I have relieved you to some extent!"

WIVES OF SOME SENATORS.

Women who have Helped to Win Their Husband's Fame.

The Washington Correspondent of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, writes:

There are many brilliant and entertaining women in the families of the present Senators. Mrs. Logan and Mrs. McPherson, wife of the New Jersey Senator, are the two cleverest women in the circle, each in a different way. Mrs. Logan is the typical Western woman and Mrs. McPherson a typical eastern woman, clever, polished, graceful and brilliant in conversation. Bad health and long absence abroad have kept Mrs. McPherson from being as generally known as she would be were she here all the time, but when present she is a power and a force quickly appreciated. Mrs. Mahone is a universal favorite, and besides shining with front of diamonds on grand occasions, shines by her conversation, which is full of humor and originality.

Mrs. Mahone always keeps a bubbling of mirth about her and relates her own experience and describes things and people in a way quite her own. She is an uncompromising American and carried the flag triumphantly through many encounters with the insufferable British tourist during her recent stay abroad. She has a proper scorn for the Europeanized American and his affectations, and a comical story that she once told was of her going to a store, or shop, rather, in an English town and innocently asking for crackers. The proprietor hunted through all the shelves and boxes and under the counter, and finally sent an apprentice boy up a ladder and brought down a dusty paper of fire crackers. Though she had to call a cracker a biscuit for the two years that she was away, Mrs. Mahone is quite the same as ever now that she is in the land where a cracker is a cracker. At Senator Sherman's her pale blue satin dress was half-covered with lace and the front of her square-cut corsage was all a glitter with the sprays, pins and ornaments of diamonds.

Mrs. Spooner, wife of the new Wisconsin Senator, who has made a stir with her maiden speech and funeral oration is another of the very clever women in the group.

Mrs. Spooner is a fine vocalist in addition to other things and is quick witted and humorous in conversation.

Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Frye give the same honors to Indiana and Maine by their clever conversation, full of witty turns, and Senator Dawe's daughter keeps up conversational fireworks right and left all the time. There are other ladies of equal talent in the circle, and Mrs. Don Cameron, Mrs. Call and Mrs. Dolph are considered the most beautiful among them while Mrs. Eustis, Mrs. Ingalls, Mrs. Manderson and Mrs. Hall are women of fine and striking appearance.

"PINKEY."

She Had a Lame Sister, for Whom She Spent Her Days Catching Mice.

Two very small boys and a sorrowful little girl came out of the garden door of an old-fashioned house on Pleasant avenue yesterday. The boys carried a small box, and the little girl a toy spade. They moved solemnly back under the elm trees, and when near the garden wall they paused. The boys dug a hole a few feet deep and laid the box in it. The other child held her apron to her eyes and wept. They were very matter-of-fact boys and piled the earth over the box in a business-like way. Every time the earth struck the box a great sob broke from under the apron. It was all over soon, and when the young lady with the brown eyes and dark hair asked the little girl why she was crying, she took the apron from her tear-stained eyes and said: "They have (sob) just buried another (sob) Pinkey there."

Who was Pinkey? Pinkey was a pussy cat, and its life and history were very dear to the infantile funeral party.

Pinkey, every one thought, had never done anything remarkable in her life, and her death, occasioned by a severe cold, was certainly sufficiently commonplace not to have attracted very wide attention.

"We got Pinkey," said the little girl, "when she was oh! very small. She was so small that she could not see, and at first we thought she had been born blind. They told us that all pussy cats were born blind, but we would never believe that Pinkey would see until one morning her eyes were wide open, and they were pink eyes, so we called her Pinkey. I must say," continued the little miss, "that she was always a very wild pussy cat, and I often told her that consumption or some such terrible disease would be her end. She was just the same as other kittens, only I noticed that at a very early age she used to sit at the window and look out in the yard. She would sit sometime for hours and hours that way, and I came to the conclusion that she must have heard my brother talking about going to sea and hunting bears, and that she, too, had made up her mind to see the world. So, whenever I saw her looking out, I would always take her in my arms, give her all the yarn I could find for her to play with, and all the milk she could drink. It was useless. She would go again and again to the window, and one day she went out.

"She didn't come home that night nor the next, and I waited and watched and hoped that nothing had happened to her. And, oh, didn't I feel glad when she did come back, and I gave her big saucers full of milk and the very best yarn in the house! She was a good pussy then for a long, long while, and it was not for a month afterward that I saw her again at the window. A great fear came over me, and I led her away; but she went out again and again every night, and only came back in the mornings. One day she killed a tiny mouse, and immediately ran with it to the door and cried as though her heart would break to be allowed to go out. I opened the door, and away she ran with the mouse over the fence, and she did not return for a week. Her eyes were red, too, and she seemed very thin. The next day Pinkey caught another mouse, and I cried: 'O Georgie! Georgie! do follow Pinkey and see where she goes.' He ran down the garden and sprang over the wall, but when he got into the churchyard beyond all he could see was the tip of Pinkey's tail going around the corner. Every day after that Georgie tried to follow her, but couldn't, and so I staid at the church corner, and one afternoon I saw Pinkey come dashing by with a little brown mouse in her mouth. I ran behind her, and saw her go under the church, and there I lost her. I went into the churchyard, under the great dark floor of the church, and searched all around for Pinkey. There is a boiler in the church for heating it on Sunday, and down by its side I heard a pussy's voice that I knew was Pinkey's. I hurried there, and, would you believe it, lying on a little straw was Pinkey. I could see by her eyes that she was dying. Lying on the straw, too, was another little pussy that had been born the same day as Pinkey, and had fallen off a fence and broken her leg. She was Pinkey's sister, and so I knew that my pussy had been saving all her mice and dainties to give her lame sister under the church floor. They died there that day, poor Pinkey from being out at night, and papa says her sister's leg must have become inflamed and cause her death. He buried them in the same box. Dear, dear! where shall I ever [illegible] such another pussy?"

So the little maid spoke, and the [illegible] with the brown eyes took her into [illegible] house, and there were tears in [illegible] too.—[New York Star.

Mr. Gladstone has been in Scotland during the past week and has addressed several large and enthusiastic public meetings at Edinburg, Glasgow and other points, in defense of his Home Rule Bill for Ireland.

THE bill reducing from eight cents to five cents the charge on domestic money orders for sums not exceeding five dollars, passed the Senate on Friday last, and having previously passed the House is now in the hands of the President.

THE Fitz John Porter bill which passed the House several weeks ago, was, on Friday last, made the special order in the Senate for to-day. Unless some unexpected obstacle turns up it will pass that body and will of course be signed by President Cleveland.

THE report that the clergymen of Portland, Maine, have petitioned the city authorities to close the saloons on Sunday, suggests the inquiry why there are any saloons in Maine, which is a Prohibition State, to be closed on Sunday, if Prohibition is supposed to prohibit.

CHARLES S. WOLFE was in Philadelphia last week and in an interview with a reporter made it quite clear that if the Prohibition State Convention should nominate him for Governor he would accept. In the event of Wolfe's nomination it is thought that Hon. A. A. Barker, of this place, will be placed on the ticket with him for Lieutenant Governor.

A PAPER away down in Main asserts that Bodwell, the Republican candidate for Governor of that State spells "cat" with a "K." But that won't hurt Bodwell's political prospects to any serious extent as he is rich and is said to be willing to contribute at least twenty thousand dollars for the benefit of the grand old party which claims to possess all the intelligence of the country.

THE application of certain citizens of Clarion county for a writ of quo warranto to compel Judge Wilson, of the Clarion and Jefferson district, to show cause why he should not be ousted for violating the election laws in promising to grant hotel licenses and other judicial favors to certain persons in return for their support in his canvass for President Judge last fall, was argued before the Deputy Attorney General at Harrisburg on yesterday week, but no decision will be arrived at for some time yet. It is the first case of the kind that has occurred in this State.

THE Philadelphia Record of Saturday last, says: The Blair Educational bill received its coup de grace yesterday. The Committee on Education held its meeting prior to adjournment and left the bantling cold and pulseless, without any hope of resurrection. This bill was the most dangerous job that ever was fairly launched in Congress. It would have been the prolific precursor of a thousand meddling philanthropists to rob the National Treasury in the name of charitable beneficence for the benefit of the swarming drones of society who are desirous by hook or crook to fasten themselves upon the public service.

ONE of the most commendable tracts in the political career of the late John Kelly, of New York, was his unwavering determination to keep the judiciary of that city above politics. "One of his old associates in speaking the other day in New York of Mr. Kelly's uniform course in regard to judicial nominations, said: He never made nominations for the Bench upon any other basis than the fitness of the man. There were several times when he could have legitimately asked one or two little favors of men he placed on the Bench but he would not do it, so scrupulous was he to avoid even the the semblance of seeking favors from the judiciary on political grounds. Efforts were made frequently to secure the nomination by Tammany of questionable men for the Bench, but Mr. Kelly would never permit it. It was almost a by-word with him, "We must keep the judiciary clean. Everything depends upon that."

FRANK GROSH, proprietor of the Sunset House, in Wernersville, Berks county, this State, a Summer resort, received a letter a few days after Mr. Cleveland's marriage asking whether he could accommodate the President and his bride for a few weeks. This letter appears to have been the work of some unauthorized person and Grosh at once wrote to Congressman Ermentrout, who represents the Berks district, in regard to the matter. The Congressman promptly wrote to Col. Lamont, the President's private Secretary for the particulars. Lamont denied the report. In the mean time the news of the President's intended visit to the Sunset House was heralded throughout the country and many letters and telegrams of inquiry came to Grosh. Then several newspapers hinted that the President had better keep away from that resort, unless he wanted to reduce his weight by starvation. Grosh claims that this is very ruinous to him and he visited Reading the other day for purpose of bringing suit against a [illegible]ber of newspapers for libellous arti-

The Primary Election.

The official returns of the Democratic primary election in this county on Saturday last will be found published in another part of our paper. They show that the vote cast is the largest that was ever before polled in the county at a similar election, the aggregate vote of the two candidates for Prothonotary being 4,048, or about 125 more than was polled in the contest for President Judge in 1883, which was the largest up to that time, and only about 770 less than Cleveland's vote in 1884. This fact is conclusive evidence of the deep interest felt by the Democrats throughout the county in the result. No complaint was made to the return Judges of any improper conduct on the part of the election officers in any of the districts, nor was there any allegation that illegal votes had anywhere been received. The ticket nominated is therefore the free and untrammeled choice of the Democratic voters of the county and must be regarded as the fair and deliberate expression of their will. It can be safely affirmed, and that too without the slightest disparagement to any of the unsuccessful aspirants, that the candidates nominated come up to the Jeffersonian Standard of competency and honesty—that they have been selected in pursuance of the rules and regulations established by the Democracy of the county for the purpose of expressing their preferences and that neither fraud nor corruption has been resorted to in bringing about the result. From these premises the conclusion follows us naturally as the day succeeds the night, that every Democrat is bound honorably and in good faith to give to the ticket his cordial, earnest and undivided support. It has been made by the Democrats of the county acting in their primary capacity and in the way and manner established by themselves, and therefore imposes upon them the highest obligation to support and defend it and see that it has a safe deliverance through the ballot boxes at the November election. We do not deem it necessary to refer now to the candidates in detail, but will do so hereafter.

MR. BAYARD, the Secretary of State, has received information of unusual activity among Mormon missionaries in Switzerland. That their preaching has not been wanting in fruits is shown by the fact that in 1885 there were in Switzerland 23 elders 16 priests, 34 teachers, 11 servants and 521 members, and 95 converts were baptized and 52 emigrants to Utah. Scarcely any Roman Catholics are numbered among the converts, nearly all of whom are of the Protestant classes. The head-quarters of Swiss Mormonism are at Berne. Free children of tender years are enrolled. General assemblies are held at Berne, Jura, Bieberist and Winterthur, the exercises consisting of praying, preaching and singing. The general assembly held at Berne on the 16th and 20th of December last, was conducted by twelve elders, was characterized by great fervor and enthusiasm, and was so largely attended that the hall which had been chartered for the occasion was crowded to overflowing. There have also been organized "Women's Aid Associations," as adjuncts to Swiss Mormonism. The one in Berne numbers nineteen, that in Scheerlifour, and that in Schaffhausen two. Mormon Sunday schools are also conducted at various points. It is stated by the press that in the cases of the departures of the newly-converted "saints" for Utah, all possible means are restored to to conceal their destination and thus to avoid their detention by the local authorities.

AMONG the public men of the United States there is not one who is more useful to the country, more upright and pure in his motives, or more worthy of public confidence than Judge Holman, who represents the Fourth district of Indiana in Congress. On Wednesday of last week he was renominated for the fifteenth time by the Democratic Convention in his district, and the Cincinnati Enquirer referring to the fact makes the following timely and sensible remarks:

"Mr. Holman has been renominated for Congress on the first ballot, and that without apparent effort, spontaneously, as the only choice of his constituency. It would have been an ineffable disgrace to the State and to the party had it been otherwise. There are times when he is impracticable; there are times when he is obstinate to the verge of eccentricity: but he is always honest, always strong, always loyal. Upon his long career in Congress there is not a stain; and year in and year out, by night and day, when others were weary and worn, and when the best and bravest were faint and silent, he has stood between thieves and the public treasury. All honor to the valiant Democratic soldier, and all honor to the constituency which so steadfastly upholds him!"

MR. CLEVELAND sent to the Senate on Monday last fifteen veto messages of bills which had originated in that body. Two of the bills were for public buildings at Zanesville and Sioux City, and the others for pensions. It is high time that a line should be drawn on public buildings for the erection of which a constant stream of bills has been flowing through the two houses during the present as well as former sessions of Congress. There is no sound reason for the passage of at least the one half of them and the sole purpose of the members who originate them is to promote their own popularity with their constituents. It is to be regretted that Mr. Cleveland didn't commence the exercise of his veto power on some of these bills earlier in the session, thus saving hundreds of thousands of dollars of the public money. These two vetoes, however, will have a wholesome and restraining effect on such plundering schemes in the future.

NOTWITHSTANDING our supposed advance in civilization it is perhaps more necessary than it was a hundred years ago to build new jails wherever we build new churches and school houses. We are not going backward, but neither are we forging ahead in point of morals at anything like the pace of our advance in money-getting or in the field of physical research. Nations generally grow corrupt as they grow rich and strong.

REMINISCENCES OF JEFFERSON.

The Simple Mode of Life of the Father of the American Constitution.

Baltimore Sun.

Sight-seers and tourists from all parts of the civilized world still occasionally pay their homage at the modest tomb in Monticello's (Va.) graveyard. An excellent country road leads from the village to Monticello, his homestead, on a little mountain top two miles off. Three hundred yards from the house, on the right of the road, the eager wayfarer catches a glimpse of the monument erected over his remains, a small granite shaft designed and inscribed as he directed in his will. It was so mutilated and chipped for relics that the inscription became unintelligible not many years ago, and Congress appropriated the money for a renewal of the monument and its railing. The work, a duplicate, fortunately for the good sense and taste of Congress, has been completed, a highly-decorated railing enclosing the consecrated spot. Not far off is the tomb of his friend, Dabney Carr, and those of his family and relatives. Wild flowers bloom interspersed between and around the graves, and, in the new enclosure, which looks rather bright, they have been planted. The sight is primitive, the shaft simple, and the effect left on the visitor's mind is that Mr. Jefferson displayed good taste in his burial directions.

Aunt Polly, an aged negro, who used to wait upon him at table, still lives in Monticello. She is evidently pressed with the honor she had of performing this special service; she says she knows she has seen one great man eat. He was a small eater, and preferred soup and vegetables to meat, wine to whisky, which in fact he did not drink at all. His wines were directly imported for his own use, and were chiefly Bordeaux and Maderia. He was a smoker, though, not of cigars; he carried about with him a big cherry stem a foot long and bowed out at the end, into which he would thrust some tobacco leaves crumpled up on the moment, and this he would smoke. The tobacco was grown on his estate, and he esteemed it over all other brands; but he was a moderate smoker, and talking rather than smoking was his forte; as he liked to talk, people liked to listen to him, and of course always with marked deference. He was very liberal in giving tips, or small change, to servants at the houses wherever he visited, and in that day it was the universal practice to tip all menial service. His purse was made of silk, and he kept both its ends well filled out with silver, thinking nothing of giving a quarter or half a dollar to a servant as a gratification. Aunt Polly recalls with particular pleasure, in looking back over her career, that Mr. Jefferson always greeted her and shook hands with her every time he returned home after an absence. The politest of men, he shook hands, in fact, with everybody, white or black, whom he knew or who was presented to him.

PECULIARITIES OF DRESS.

His every day and Sunday clothes were of homespun grayish cloth and home make; a roundabout, red vest, both buttoning up around the neck, knee-breeches, home-knit stockings, pumps with silver buckles, and a broad-brimmed slouch hat constituted his outfit in dress. In very cold weather he tied a red comforter around his neck, country fashion. About his linen he was very particular, and the washer-woman in charge at Monticello were careful to do it up exactly in accordance with his fancy. It was with extreme reluctance that he at last laid aside knee-breeches to don the more fashionable pantaloons. When riding out he used in winter woolen and leather "leggings," and however spattered with mud on returning home he removed them with his own hands seated before a blazing hickory fire. He accustomed himself never to call on others for assistance which he could readily do without; but in those little matters which called for outside attention, viz., cleaning his room, preparing the articles of his toilet, repairing his clothes and keeping them in trim, he was exacting, and his servants were thoroughly drilled to fulfill his expectations. Wherever he might be his deportment was very quiet and dignified, though he could adapt himself readily to any assemblage. The children of the village and its neighborhood literally adored him as a hero, their own hero, so naturally did he please them, and ladies, of whose society he was fond, were devoted to him. At his funeral a big crowd attended, including all the servants on the place, who exhibited their sorrow in many tears. After his death Monticello was occupied for eight years, and during the interval his bed room, with everything in it as he left it, was untouched. It was small and simply furnished. usually he rose with the sun, and before breakfast took a stroll around the yard and to the stables. He was a good-looking man, and had sandy hair up to his death, that it is to say his hair did not turn gray, nor was he in the least bald. Crowds visited the house and grounds for years after his death, and even after Commodore Levy, of the United States navy, bought the estate in 1834. The commodore's heir now owns it, and has latterly been endeavoring to restore the mansion to its pristine state. It would be a suitable act if the estate should be purchased in the name of the country and given to Mr. Jefferson's nearest kin, some of whom still reside at Charlottesville.

Beware of the Wolfe!

The probability of Charles S. Wolfe being Prohibition candidate for Governor means notice to the Republican State Convention to put their best foot foremost in the formation of their ticket and declaration of policy. It is a favorite amusement of certain organs and politicians to sneer at Mr. Wolfe as a political crank, but he is not the man to be put down with sneers. He is a bold, aggressive and able campaigner, and thousands of people who will deplore the stand he has taken will admire the courage of the man and be insensibly moved in sympathy with him. The cause he has espoused has now reached a stage when it can no longer be ignored by the statesman or the politician. As a moral issue it appeals to the sympathy and judgement of humanity in much the same way that the slavery issue did when a handful of abolition agitators were sneered at by the political parties and boycotted by the mercantile community who measured their principles by the cotton bale standard. But their cause grew stronger and stronger until it overwhelmed one of the great parties and compelled a recognition of the anti-slavery principle by the organization which took its place. History repeats itself. It may not be to-day or to-morrow, but like causes produce like effects in the end. How best to avert from the Republican party the fate which befell the Whig party, for ignoring a great moral issue which by the force of natural circumstances had become a political question, is a problem of sufficient magnitude to employ all the wisdom and discretion of the men who assume the direction of the party's counsels. As Mr. Quay recently remarked, the political atmosphere this year is not favorable for bossism, and the less of it developed in the formation of the State ticket the less opportunity will be given to men like Charley Wolfe, to recruit their forces from the Republican ranks. If wise counsels prevail, the success of the Republican party next fall is reasonably assured; but if the ticket is not the very strongest that can be formed, the hotly-contested battle that will follow will be one of doubtful issue. —Lancaster New Era Rep.

SUN SPOTS AND THE WEATHER.

A Newspaper Astronomer Who Does Not Exactly Agree With Dr. A. Young.

New York Tribune.

Three tornadoes and several thunder storms were reported from Dakota and the adjacent region Friday night, almost simultaneously with destructive lightning and torrents of rain in Poictiers, France. It is a coincidence of no account, perhaps, that at the same time three earthquakes were felt in the latter district and a slight disturbance of terra firma on the New Jersey shore; although Proctor says that storms and earthquakes frequently come together. But there was another coincidence worth mentioning in connection with the weather phenomena just mentioned. Within forty-eight hours of their occurrence, and preceding them, a sun spot came into view on the edge of the solar orb, by the revolution of that body, and another and larger one brooke out on the side of the sun turned toward us. It may be added that the destructive storm at Kansas City, the cloud bursts at Xenia and St. Louis, several tornadoes in Indiana and Ohio, the hurricane which mowed down a forest of oaks in the suburbs of Madrid, Spain, another which devastated the vineyards of Montpelier France, extraordinary gales in Germany, and the tornado which swept over Lonato, Lombardy, between May 11 and 14 were also preceeded, at an interval of from a few hours to two days, by the appearance of large and particularly active sun spots.

The notion that some relation exists between sun spts and terrestrial disturbances, especially of the weather, is an old one, and has been pretty generally discredited by scientists whose opinions the civilized world is bound to respect. Nevertheless, during the last twelve or fifteen years it has been discussed quite earnestly by men of reputation and eminence in astronomy and meteorology, and, though a long way from being established, has certainly gained somewhat in acceptance. The imperfect manner in which observations of solar storms have been conducted, the undue haste of enthusiasts in interpreting the phenomena actually observed, the apparent conflicts in the evidence actually secured, the intricacy and novelty of some of the problems which it raises, and other circumstances have combined to prevent a final termination of the truth or falsity of the theory as yet. But continued attention to the possibility in question has led a number of men, independently of each other, to notice striking coincidences between solar and terrestrial disturbances, similar to those just mentioned. Dozens of tornadoes, scores of thunder and hail storms and several cloud-bursts, for instance, have occurred in the United States and Europe within the last three months, inside of two or three days after the appearance of violent commotion in the sun's gaseous envelope; and the three greatest storms and cold waves of last winter in this country followed close upon similar solar phenomena. These few facts are quite inadequate to prove any theory, but they challenge consideration and justify respectful treatment of the "sun spot cranks" until the matter has been more closely studied.

Two recent events illustrate how that intense religious hostility of those holding diverse churchly views is rapidly passing away. Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia, has just been honored by the university of Pennsylvania with the degree of LL. D., in recognition of his great talent and learning. This is the first time in the history of that institution that an honorary degree was conferred upon a Roman Catholic. There are those living who well remember the days of the Know-Nothing riots in Philadelphia when Catholic churches had to defended against the fury of the mob. It is safe to say that such a fanatical order of things will never again be restored. The funeral of Rabbi Gutheim in New Orleans, a few days ago is another illustration of the same liberality that characterizes modern views of religion and religious men. As a mark of respect to the deceased many stores were closed, the courts were adjourned and resolutions were introduced in the Senate deploring his death and an adjournment of that body was had out of respect to his memory. These tokens of admiration for men representing persecuted sects are finger-boards that point surely to a wiser and better dispensation.

Undigested Food.

In the stomach develops an acid which stings the upper part of the throat and palate, causing "heartburn." It also evolves a gas which produces "wind on the stomach," and a feeling and appearance of distension in that organ after eating. For both this acidity and swelling Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a much better remedy than alkaline salts, like hartshorn and carbonate of soda. A wineglassful of the Bitters, after or before dinner, will be found to act as a genuine carminative or preventive. This fine specific for dyspepsia, both in its acute and chronic form, also prevents and cures malarial fever, constipation, liver complaint, kidney troubles, nervousness and debility. Persons who observe in themselves a decline of vigor should use this fine tonic without delay.

—Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, which is reported to have been destroyed by an earthquake the latter part of May, was a city of about 16,000 inhabitants. It had a national palace, several churches, a city hall and other large buildings. The city sank three feet during the shock.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Consumptives and all, who suffer from any affection of the throat and lungs, can find a certain cure in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Thousands of permanent cures verify the truth of this statement. No medicine can show such a record of wonderful cures. Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now gratefully proclaim they owe their lives to this New Discovery. It will cost you nothing to give it a trial. Free trial bottles at E. James' drug store. Large size, $1 00.

—A band of men,130 strong, rode into Grantsvill,W. Va., on yesterday week and, at the muzzle of rifle and revolver, compelled the Judge and prosecuting Attorney to sign a paper that a man named Sickels and his son, arrested for murder would be tried at once. The mob had prepared a scaffold and was ready to hang the two men if any objection had been mape.

Hay Fever and Rose Cold

Are attended by an inflamed condition of the lining membrane of the nostrils, tear-ducts and throat, affecting the lungs. An acrid mucus is secreted, the discharge is accompanied with a burning sensation. There are severe spasms of sneezing, frequent attacks of headache, watery and inflamed eyes. Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy that can be depended upon. 50 cents at druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cents. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N Y.

—Avoid by all means the use of calomel for bilious complaints. Ayer's Cathartic Pills compounded entirely of vegetable ingredients, have been tested for forty years, and are acknowledged to be the best remedy ever devised for torpidity of the liver, costiveness, and all derangements of the digestive apparatus.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. George V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two bottles of Electric Bitters and is so much improved, that she is able now to do her own work." Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at E. James'.

NEWS AND OTHER NOTINGS.

—For colds, croup, asthma, bronchitis and sore throat, use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and not the genuine.

—A man has been arrested in Raleigh, N. C., charged with striking another with a mud turtle. The point has been raised that a mud turtle is not a deadly weapon.

—John Gleason, while trying to stop a street fight at Newport, Ky., Monday last, was stabbed by a man named Banner. Gleason died in a few minutes.

—Two six-year old boys, while playing in a bin of shelled corn in an elevator at Dana, Indiana, on Thursday of last week, were caught in a vortex of sinking grain and smothered.

—Three girls named Eugenia Knight, Lena Whitehurst and Hattie Jones, while bathing in a creek near Temple, Tex., got beyond their depth, and being unable to swim, were drowned.

—Ayer's Sarsaparilla operates radically upon and through the blood, and is a safe and absolute cure for the various diseases, complaints, and disorders due to debility or any constitutional taint or infection.

—A furious storm of wind, rain and hail visited Bushnell, Illinois, on Wednesday afternoon of last week. A circus tent was blown down and thirty persons were injured, several dangerously. Fences and trees were also levelled.

—When one sees the impure fats that are sometimes used in soap making he is inclined to doubt the cleansing qualities of the soap. Dreydoppel's Borax Soap is made from the purest refined tallow, and is guaranteed pure and healthful.

—Eli Owens, arrested for an outrage on his sister-in-law, aged 16, was taken from jail at Benton, N. C., one day last week at 2 o'clock and hanged from a tree by a masked party of men from Alexandria, where the outrage was committed.

—John Coulter of Richmond, Mo., attempted to hive a swarm of bees the other day, and they lighted upon him, and nearly stung him to death. It was thought that he would surly die, but he managed to pull thro' and is now very sore but convalescent.

—Many suffering people drag themselves about with failing strength, feeling that they are steadily sinking into the grave, when by using Parker's Tonic they would find a cure commencing with the first dose, and vitality and strength surely coming back to them.

—Hezekiah Allton, a West Virginia preacher, was taken from his bed on Wednesday night of last week by a band of masked riders and carried to the woods, where he was terribly whipped and otherwise terribly maltreated. It is claimed that he had dishonored his cloth.

—An Arkansas farmer writes that last year, when coons made havoc in his corn field, he went to the drug store to buy strychnine with which to kill them. By mistake the druggist gave him morphine, and the next morning found his field full of sleeping coons. He advises the use of morphine instead of strychnine.

—Seventeen years ago Thomas Stewart of Chicago, was sentenced to imprisonment for life for the murder of Harry Hulbert. It now appears that Eliza Reilley, a woman for whom he had a boyish devotion, committed the crime, and that he voluntarily sacrificed himself in her behalf. He was released on Tuesday of last week.

—A Virginia City saloon keeper, who was making arragements for a slugging match in that city, knocked out one of the clergymen of the place in one round by calling on him and asking the loan of a lot of chairs from the chapel on which to seat the spectators at the fight. He offered the preacher a free ticket for the use of the chairs.

—A telegram from Santiago, Chilli says that during the election there on Tuesday of last week a great riot occurred. Forty persons were killed and many wounded. The hospitals are full of injured persons. Senor Distor, a prominent member of the Radical party, was killed. The result of the election is supposed to be in favor of the Liberals.

—May Hatch, a young woman of Baltimore, left home on Monday last ostensibly to go shopping. She, however, took the steamer Chatham for Boston, and when off Block Island on Thursday morning threw herself into the sea. Her body was recovered next day. She had been in delicate health for some time, but her mind appeared to be perfectly clear.

—While a party of colored people were going home from church at Hanesville, Georgia, on Tuesday of last week, they quarrelled over the words of the preacher's text. Richard Perry tried to stop the dispute. He was fired upon and instantly killed by Samuel Martin. The fight then became general, resulting in the fatal wounding of Martin, Thomas Mead and Mrs. Alcinda Law.

—John Carothers, while burning brush near Akron, Ohio, caught his foot in a brush heap, and was in danger of being burned to death. His yells brought a man, who said, "Pay me $5 you owe me, and I'll help you out." Carothers insisted that he didn't owe any $5. "All right, then burn," said the man and he walked away. Carothers then by frantic efforts released himself, but not before he was badly scorched.

—Herman Reddle was digging a well at McAlister, I. T. He arranged a charge for blasting, lighted the fuse, and was hoisted toward the surface forty feet above. When half way up the rope broke, and he fell to the bottom. He tried to grasp and extinguish the fuse, but was too late. The charge exploded; Herman was blown nearly to the top of the well, and fell back dead with every bone in his body broken.

—Two highwaymen recently stopped the British Columbian Express Company's coach on the Cache Creek route. They told Driver Tate to get down from the box, but he said it wasn't safe to leave the horses. "It's a d——d sight safer than to sit there," said one of the robbers, "Get down." He got down, and one of the bandits stood in front of the team with his rifle cocked and pointed at Tate, while the other went through the treasure bag which they robbed of its contents, with the exception, as the report says, "of one small package of $1,000 which they overlooked.

LONG SUFFERING.

From Stone in the Kidneys.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.
W. J. McElroy, Macon, Ga.

COSTIVENESS

affects seriously all the digestive and assimilative organs, including the Kidneys. When these organs are so affected, they fail to extract from the blood the uric acid, which, carried through the circulation, causes Rheumatism and Neuralgia.

The functions of the Liver are also affected by costiveness, causing Bilious Disorders.

Among the warning symptoms of Biliousness are Nausea, Dizziness, Headache, Weakness, Fever, Dimness of Vision, Yellowness of Skin, Pains in the Side, Back and Shoulders, Foul Mouth, Furred Tongue, Irregularity in the action of the Bowels, Vomiting, etc.

The Stomach suffers when the bowels are constipated, and Indigestion or follows, Fetid Breath, Gastric Pains, Headache, Acidity of the Stomach, Water-brash, Nervousness, and Depression, are all evidences of the presence of this distressing malady. A Sure Relief for Irregularities of the Stomach and all consequent diseases, will be found in the use of AYER'S PILLS.

Dyspepsia,

They stimulate the stomach, free the bowels, healthfully invigorate the torpid liver and kidneys, and by their cleansing, healing and tonic properties, strengthen and purify the whole system, and restore it to a salutary and normal condition.

—The publication of the election table and jury list has crowded out of our columns quite a lot of local and other matter. However, any thing of importance will be published in our next issue.

—If you want any fertilizers to use this season, leave your order for what you want at Barkers' so that you will get them in time, as these goods are not kept on hand, and will be sold only on orders.

—A great grandfather, his daughter, her son, and the son's son work together on a Hopewell township farm, Huntingdon county, nearly every day now. The eldest is eighty-four years of age and the youngest nineteen.

—Go to J. & H. A. Shoemaker for pure ground bone dust for buckwheat, wheat and rye.

—A young man named David Dowler, working on Cassiday's log drive, was drowned at Little Basin, Clearfield county, in the Susquehanna river, on Friday last. His remains were interred at Burnside on Sunday. He was a son of James Dowler of the latter place.

—Go to J. & H. A. Shoemaker for your phosphate. They deal only in first class goods.

—Mrs. Gussie Waterson, wife of A. D. V. Waterson, Esq., of Pittsbuag, and a niece of Mr. F. D. Saupp, of Loretto, Mr. W. W. Saupp, Mrs. S. E. Burns and Mrs. Robert Shields, of Altoona, and Mr. Louis Saupp of Bedford, died at Bedford on Monday evening. She was about 25 years of age and leaves an infant daughter.

—You can have your choice of hay rakes at Barkers', as they have different kinds for sale.

—Adjutant J. C. Noon Post, G. A. R. No. 343, at Coalport, and the Catholic congregation of the same place, will hold a consolidated picnic on the 3rd of July next. A parade at 8 A. M., a sham battle in the afternoon and a balloon ascension in the evening will be among the attractions offered to those who attend. The Gallitzin Cornet Band will furnish the music. Rev. Father McEntee will deliver an address after the parade. A number of distinguished persons have been invited to attend.

—Leave your orders for phosphate or any kind of fertilizers at Barkers'.

—Lewis Rankin's house in Cambria township, three and one half miles west of Ebensburg, was burned to the ground with nearly all its contents on Wednesday of last week. The family were absent at the time, and some men who were working for Mr. Rankin had made a fire to cook their meal and the fire occurred after they had left the house and gone to their work. A defective flue is supposed to have been the cause of the fire. The building was insured in the Somerset and Cambria for $1200 on the building and $200 on the furniture which will nearly cover the loss.

FRESH NEWS EVERY DAY FROM GABLE & CO.

They pay for space in order to call the attention of the many readers of this paper to the numberless bargains in their store (1402 Eleventh avenue, Altoona, Pa.) and everybody should heed what they say, for this space is too valuable for them to use without SAYING SOMETHING. When they tell you they are offering Balbriggan Underwear at 37½c., worth 50c., you had better pay attention; it might save you 25 per cent. on your investments in such goods. This 25 per cent. saved applies to more than Balbriggan Underwear; it applies to every department.

—If you want a hay rake buy it at Barkers'.

—Go to J. & H. A. Shoemaker for your cast or wrought iron fencing.

—Five hundred men wanted! Also same number of ladies and children to call at the store of Loretto Merchandise Co., and examine our stock of dress goods, dry goods, men's clothing, ladies' and gent's fine shoes. Ladies' fine kid button shoes $1.90 to $2.85. Try our $2.00 kid button shoes; they are excellent for the price. In groceries we handle only pure goods. Wool wanted in exchange for goods.

—Emma Lute, unmarried and a resident of Susquehanna township, was arrested at her home last Monday, and taken before Squire Baker, where she was bound over on the charge of killing her illegitimate child. It is alleged that the child was taken to a garret and there allowed to remain until life became extinct.

—Mr. J. W. Leech was re-elected principal of the common schools of this place by the school directors at their meeting on last Monday night. During Mr. Leech's incumbency of the position he has discharged its duties with great credit to himself and with entire satisfaction to the pupils attending the schools under his charge.

—Peter Herdic, once known as the Williamsport lumber king, received the contract a year ago to supply Huntingdon with water. One day last week his men were excavating at the new reservoir at the head of fifth street, when, at the depth of about eight feet from the surface, J. D. McClain, Herdic's foreman, discovered an earthen pot, securely sealed, which was filled to the brim with Mexican and American gold and silver coins of ancient date. McClain refuses to make public the amount of money the pot contained, but his friends say it is several thousand dollars. As soon as the discovery was made known Mr Herdic put in a claim for the treasure on the ground that it was found on his property, while McClain insists that it is under the common law relating to treasure-trove. Mrs. Christian Colestock is another claimant. Her deceased husband sold the land to Herdic, and the widow alleges that the money was buried by Colestock years ago for safe-keeping. All the parties have employed counsel, and the ownership of the contents of the pot will be tested in the Courts.

Boy Drowned.

On Sunday evening the family of Mr. Valentine Buck, of Clearfield township, about dark missed their little six-year-old boy. They proceeded to hunt for him for some time without success, and becoming alarmed summoned the neighbors, who continued the search all night with torches and lanterns without finding the boy. On Monday morning the whole neighborhood turned out and a lot of men from Chest Springs also assisted in the search. On Tuesday morning several wagon loads of men went from Carrolltown to assist in the search for the missing boy. Some time during the morning his dead body was found in the Chest creek not far from his home, and it is supposed that while playing near the creek he fell in and was drowned.

Book Notice.

Godey's Lady's Book for July opens its one hundred and thirteenth volume, and is an especially bright and handsome number. The frontispiece, entitled "The Wedding Day," is the companion picture to the one given in the June number. It is a pretty subject well rendered, and is made more attractive by being the subject of an original story from the pen of the well-known author Augusta De Bubna. Another pretty illustration, "The Old Story," is a quaint picture of cats, with a fascinating poem written by Mary E Bradley. The colored and black fashion designs give innumerable varieties of seaside and mountain costumes. "The Coronet of Thorns," by J. V. Pritchard, sustains its brilliant translation from the German of E. Laddey, entitled "Found—Not Sought," is to be concluded in the next number. A variety of good short stories and poems complete a number that shows decided improvement under the new management. The subscription price to Godey's Lady's Book is $2.00 a year, or $1.00 for the six remaining months commencing with the July number.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED.

The following marriage licenses were issued by the Clerk of the Orphans' Court during the week ended Wednesday June 23, 1886:

George Robinson and Ellen Hill, South Fork.

Wilford L. McGough and Lizzie Wallace, Lilly.

Henry Samuel Huey Gallitzin and Mary Jane O'Hara, Bennington.

Joseph Tomsick and Annie Hardan, Cambria.

John A. Boland, Washington township, and Susan Addlesberger, Summit.

How do You Feel?

If you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes badly, poor appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver or biliousness, and nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as to take Simmons Liver Regulator. Take a half-tablespoonful after each meal. Increase or reduce the dose as will be found enough to produce one action from the bowels every day, and in a short time you will be perfectly cured.

—Independence Day will be celebrated at Ebensburg on Saturday, July 3rd. A fantastic parade, foot races, sack races, a first class dinner in Huntley's grove, dancing and everything else that is calculated to give enjoyment to those in attendance will be provided by the committee on arrangements. Do not fail to attend.

—Mr. Will J. Ward, formerly foreman in the FREEMAN office which position he was obliged to relinquish on account of ill health, left on Monday last on a visit to his sister Mrs. P. A. Schwab at Coatesville Pa. He intends to remain some three or four weeks and take a trip to New York in the meantime.

—Mrs. Mary Catharine O'Hara, wife of Mr. George O'Hara of Altoona, died at her home in that city on Saturday last. The deceased was a daughter of the late Silas M. Parrish, of Munster township, and was in the 31st year of her age. Her remains were interred in St. John's cemetery, Altoona, on Tuesday last.

—E. P. Baker, Esq., of Susquehanna township, who had been laboring under the impression that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Assembly, found out different when here last week and in compliance with instructions received from the men who manage the Republican party, authorized the Herald last week to announce that he was not a candidate. We feel sorry for Mr. Baker that his aspirations were thus early nipped in the bud but trust that he has by this time learned that when he is wanted as a candidate the bosses will let him know.

Democratic Co. Committee Meeting.

At 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon, the newly elected committeemen from the different districts met at Armory Hall and were called to order by the chairman, W. Horace Rose, Esq.

A motion was made and carried that the candidates, in conjunction with the present chairman, select the chairman of the county committee for the ensuing year.

W. Horace Rose, Esq. and John W. Wonders of Johnstown, Caron Lahey of Lilly, and Henry J. Hopple of Barr township, were selected as delegates to the State convention.

Dr. George W. Wagner, of Johnstown, was chosen member of the State Central Committee.

On motion the chairman appointed a committee of five on resolutions, consisting of the following gentlemen: Caron Lahey of Lilly, J. B. Stalb of Susquehanna township, P. E. Dillon of Elder township, A. D. Criste of Munster township, and John Hannon of Johnstown, who reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved—That in common with the Democracy of the Union the Democrats of Cambria feel a just pride in the administration of President Cleveland; that we regard him as a pure, upright man and a faithful public servant who is actuated in the discharge of the duties of his high office by the most patriotic and unselfish motives, and with a single desire to promote the best interests of the whole country.

Resolved—That Gov. Robert E. Pattison has earned for himself the gratitude and thanks not only of the Democracy of Pennsylvania, but of the people of the entire State, for the firm, fearless and independent manner in which he has discharged his official duties; that he has proven himself to be a true and courageous advocate of reform and a genuine friend of the highest interests of the people.

Resolved—That we favor the enforcement of the constitution of the State in its every article and section and insist especially that the Legislature shall enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of Article XVII as applicable to railroads.

Resolved—That the next Legislature ought to repeal the odious and unnecessary tax law of the last session with as much promptness as it was enacted.

Resolved—That we bespeak for the ticket this day nominated the united, active and energetic support of the Democracy of the county.

Wool! Wool! Wool!

Hemlock Items.

All the mines in this vicinity are idle; while the prospects for resumption at an early date are not encouraging.

Many are the evils attending strikes; the miners spend their savings, whatever they be, in ways that are neither beneficial to themselves or to the community. At least this is true of many of them. The consequences are that when work resumes they are not fit physically to do a day's work.

Mr. Geo. Brant, proprietor of the Rush House, has returned from Philadelphia, where he had gone to have his eyes treated by a specialist.

Mr. Lambert George, of this place, has accepted a position as express agent at Cresson. He is a competent and obliging young man and will fill the bill to perfection.

Mr. Daniel Cologne and Miss Agness Montgomery, both of Washington township, were married in the Catholic church at Lilly By Rev. Father Brown on Tuesday last.

At the same place, on the same day, and by the same Rev. Father, Mr. John Brondwell and Miss Margaret Sheridan, both of Washington township.

Also at the same place, same day, and by the same, Mr. W. Wilford L. McGough and Miss lizzie Wallace, both of Lilly borough.

We tender our congratulations to our friend Wilford and his fair young bride upon their entrance into the realms of matrimony. Both are all we could wish them to be in all that makes up true manhood and womanhood. That their life may have many of the pleasures and few of the sorrows of the world is the wish of a friend. C.

Married.

BRADLEY—TROXELL.—Married at Gallitzin on Tuesday June 22, 1886, by Rev. Father Boyle, Mr. Francis X. Bradley and Miss Emily E. Troxell, both of Gallitzin.

AUDITOR'S NOTICE.—The undersigned Auditor having been appointed by the Orphans' Court of Cambria county to report distribution of the fund in the hands of Catharine McCarty, Administratrix of Chambers A. Parsons, deceased, as shown by her first and final account, will attend to the duties of his appointment at his office in the Borough of Ebensburg, Pa. on Tuesday the 20th day of July, 1886, at one o'clock p. m. when and where all parties interested must present their claims, or be forever debarred from coming in on said fund.

F. G. KERR, Auditor.
Ebensburg, Pa. June 23rd 1886. 3t.

A BIG OFFER To introduce them we will GIVE AWAY 1,000 Self-Operating Washing Machines. If you want one send us your name, P. O. and express office at once. The National Co., 21 Dey St., New York.

LADIES!

With Hanover's Taylor System you can cut Dresses to fit, without oral instructions. Dressmakers pronounce it perfect. Price for System Book and Double Tracing Wheel, $6.50.

TO INTRODUCE

A System Book and Wheel will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address JOHN C. HANOVER, Cincinnati, O.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address Dr. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

WOMEN

Needing renewed strength, or who suffer from infirmities peculiar to their sex, should try

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

QUALITY P PURITY NOT QUANTITY

THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine combines Iron with pure vegetable tonics, and is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It Enriches and Purifies the Blood, Stimulates the Appetite, Strengthens the Muscles and Nerves—in fact, thoroughly Invigorates.

Clears the complexion, and makes the skin smooth. It does not blacken the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—all other Iron medicines do.

MRS. ELIZABETH BAIRD, 74 Farwell Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., says, under date of Dec. 26th, 1884: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters, and it has been more than a doctor to me, having cured me of the weakness ladies have in life. Also cured me of Liver Complaint, and now my complexion is clear and good. Has also been beneficial to my children."

MRS. LOUISA C. BRAGDON, East Lockport, N. Y., says: "I have suffered untold misery from Female Complaints, and could obtain relief from nothing except Brown's Iron Bitters."

Genuine has above Trade Mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the petition of Almira Vickroy, wife of Edwin Augustus Vickroy has presented her petition to the Court of Common Pleas of the county of Cambria, praying the said Court to authorize her to have the power to act and have the power to do business as a feme sole trader, according to the provisions of the act of Assembly in such cases made and provided and that said petition will be acted upon by said Court on Monday, July 5th 1886.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The Savory drumhead cabbage is now recognized as one of the very best late varieties.

Unless the manure is old and well rotted it should not be allowed to touch the roots of the fruit trees, but be spread upon the surface.

In ploughing under green crops it should be done while the crop is yet green and full of sap, generally before it has attained full growth.

A New England poultry raiser keeps lice from his fowls and their house by the free use of powdered sulphur about the nests and in the dust bath.

An egg broken in the feed once or twice a day will tone up a horse's system and make his hair glossy. But special foods are to be used only for emergencies.

A Nebraska farmer, who has been experimenting with blue grass, concludes that all Northern Nebraska will prove to be one of the finest tame-grass countries in the world.

For the purpose of converting the largest proportion of the wheat straw into valuable manure, the stack should be built in the centre of such a yard, and sufficient straw be scattered from time to time to keep the yard in a passable condition.

An earthen floor is the best tor the poultry house. A cement surface underneath possesses the advantage of perfect dryness for the extra cost, as it is not difficult to keep your earthen floor reasonable dry, provided you raise a mound of earth for the house to stand on, and surround it with a ditch to catch rain.

The hogs should have undisputed sway in the orchard during the fruit season and they will eat up all the fallen and wormy apples and hunt out many of the grubs, etc., which are injurious to the trees. In this way they destroy many of the enemies of sound fruit and sound trees, and in other ways greatly benefit the orchard.

Prospects of a bountiful wheat crop are excellent. From reports from Minnesota, Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa and Newbraska the season has been remarkably favorable favorable, and though older farmers are diversifying their crops at a greater extent than ever before, much new land has been put under cultivation of wheat by newcomers.

Red clover should be more extensively cultivated both for forage and for its remarkable fertilizing qualities, especially on clay and clay sbbsoil lands. Its long roots penetrated deep into those heavy clay soils, and decaying mix with it just what it needs—vegetable mold. This loosens and livens up the soils and puts them in condition to better nourish plant growth, and the consequence is that they yield much heavier crops than before clover was grown on them.

Of all the leaks on a farm, says the Rural World, a leaky, sloping barnyard is the worst. The time honored fashion of placing the barn on a knoll on the highest spot of land near the house is a most reprehensible one. More wealth glides away from such a sunny, elevated barnyard than can be computed. It must reach far up into the millions annually. The number of barns that are so placed that the water that falls from the roof at each rain and rushes through and washes out the most valuable soluble portions, can be numbered by the hundreds of thousands.

To make the manure heap of the various kinds of farm animals should be daily or frequently scattered over the straw in the yard, so that each, possessing a distinctive value of its own, would become thoroughly commingled, and thus form a manure in common, that is especially well adapted to growing all kinds of crops. Such daily or weekly deposits in the manure bank enables the thrifty farmer to check out from time to time a reasonable amount of valuable manure without danger of overdrawing his account. The farmer who has a good bank of well-decomposed manure made annually subject to his order, is, and can be, the only true independent one, for the income derived from abundant crops will as surely make him so as ten times one are ten. Feed the soil, and it will, in turn, feed, clothe and enrich you.

How Postage Stamps are Made.

The design of the stamp is engraved on steel, and, in the printing, plates are used on which 200 stamps have been engraved. Two men are kept busy at work covering these with colored inks and passing them to a man and girl who are equally busy printing them with large rolling hand presses. Three of these little squads are employed all the time. After the small sheets of paper containing 200 printed stamps have dried enough, they are sent into another room, and gummed. The gum used for this purpose is a peculiar composition, made of the powder of dried potatoes and other vegetables, mixed with water. After having been again dried, this time on little racks fanned by steam power for about an hour, they are put between sheets of pasteboard, and pressed in hydraulic presses capable of applying a weight of 2,000 tons. The next thing is to cut the sheets in two, each sheet, of course, when cut, containing 100 stamps. This is done by a girl with a large pair of shears, cutting by hand being preferred to that by machinery, which would destroy too many stamps. They are then passed to another squade of workers, who perforate the paper between the stamps. Next they are pressed once more, and then packed and labeled and stowed away to be sent out to the various offices when ordered. If a single stamp is torn or in any way mutilated, the whole sheet of 100 stamps is burned. Not less than 500,000 are said to be burned every week from this cause. The greatest care is taken in counting the sheets of stamps to prevent pilfering by the employees; and it is said that, during the past twenty years, not a single stamp has been lost in this way. During the process of manufacturing the sheets are counted eleven times.

The man who is entirely out of debt these times is a lucky man and should be a happy man.

RANDOLPH OF ROANOKE.

Two New Anecdotes of That Brilliant but Eccentric Gentlemen.

A reader of the Savannah News sends to that paper two hitherto unpublished anecdotes of John Randolph, saying at the same time that he is no admirer of the "vain, overbearing, haughty and pretty-minded" Virginian.

Randolph's fastidiousness as to the use of pure English and the proper application of English words is a matter of history. It happened that at a social gathering a young gentleman, who had been attached to some legation abroad, made use of the word "classify" in a sense that excited the disapproval of Mr. Randolph. He was quick to resent it.

"It is extremely unpleasant," said he, "to hear careless or ignorant persons debasing the language by a wrong application of words or phrases. Now, sir, you have used the word classify in a connection that is entirely wrong."

The young attache, dreadfully mortified, colored deeply and retired from the conversation. There chanced to be present a Mr. Harris, a member of the Richmond Bar and a relative of the victim: He took up the cudgels of defense.

"Really, Mr. Randolph," he said "you are too hard on my young kinsman. I think that his application of the word was perfectly correct anp proper."

"You think," retorted Randolph. "I don't believe you know the meaning of the word. Pray, sir, what is the meaning of classify?"

"Well," returned Mr. Harris, good-naturedly, "I don't know that I can give a technical definition of the word, but I can classify the books of your library by the size of the volumnes, or I can classify the members of the Richmond Bar by the initial letter of their names."

"I thought so!" said Randolph; "you know nothing about it. Suppose I should classify, as you term it, the books of my library by the size of the volumnes, a pretty mixture I should make. Or, suppose I should classify [here a sneer] the members of the Richmond Bar by the initial letters of their names. Let us see! There's Mr. Boggs: he'd stand at the head of the list. God forbid! There's Mr. Wickham; he'd stand at the foot of it; a most improper place for him! There's yourself; Harris. H? The Greeks esteemed H no letter. We'd place you nowhere."

The other anecdote is even more unpleasant. One day Randolph was attacked with a sudden faintness, and immediately made up his mind that he was about to die. Accordingly he dispatched he faithful attendant, Juba, with orders to bring him a clergyman. Juba, diligent though he was, succeeded only in finding an itinerant preacher, zealous enough but very illiterate.—Randolph received the reverend gentleman with great urbanity and offered him refreshments. After these had been partaken of he invited his guest to read the Bible to him. The preacher consented, and proceeded at once to suit the action to the word. Directly he mispronounced a word.

"I beg your pardon!" exclaimed the Sage of Roanoke, "you pronounce that word wrong. The proper pronunciation is——"

The parson corrected himself, apolgized and proceeded with the lecture. Every one knows how frequently the same word is repeated in the Biblical text. Directly the unluckly word again occured.

"I told you, Randolph, with asperity, "that you mispronounced that word and you have done it again."

The clerical gentleman again made due correction, apologized and proceeded. Randolph watched and directly the unhappy word was about to turn upon once more.

"Stop!" screamed he in his high treble; "stop! lay aside the book. I'd rather go to h—l and be d—d than to hear you mispronounce that word again!"

A Man of Determination.

Ward H. Lamon, Mr. Lincoln's Illinois partner, who was appointed by him United States Marshal for the District of Columbia, was a man of gigantic size and herculean strength. Among the many anecdotes related about him was that of his contest with Secretary Stanton for the jail at Washington. Marshal Lamon had in custody there a number of colored prisoners, legally committed, and he refused to liberate them. One afternoon he went to dine with old Mr. Blair out at Silver Springs, and when he returned his deputy informed him that the military Governor had taken possession of the jail, and put there a sergeant and about a dozen men. Lamon consulted Mr. Carlisle, his regular counsel, and ascertained that this intrusion was utterly without warrant of law, announced his intention of retaking the place, which he proceeded to do at once. A one, with his own hands, he disarmed the entire party, took the keyes from the sergeant, locked him up and his men, stacked their arms, and then reported to Mr. Lincoln the state of affairs. He was sustained, as he always was, by the President, and in due time a ponderous opinion from Father Bates put an end to the militrry siege of the jail, which Lamon meanwhile had put into a posture of defense, and determined to hold at any cost. About the same time Mr. Stanton had made up his mind to seize a house that Lamon had bought and was fitting up for the reception of his family. "If you do that," said Lamon, at the conclusion of the interview in which the Secretary had been very offensive, "I'll kill you." Stanton went immediately to the President and informed him that the Marshal had threatened to murder him. "Vell, Stanton;" said Lincoln, "if he really said it, I'd advise you to prepare for your end, for he's a man of his word. But I'll see him, and try and if I can get him to spare your life on my account. He's a great friend of mine, you know." But Mr. Stanton did not take the house.

The young man who spends his money before he earns it is always a slave to him who earns it before he spends it.

The hatter becomes a power in politics when he makes his influence felt.

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?
Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or indigestion the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, rapid eating, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., N. Y.

Names of European Countries.

These are derived principally from some particulac cause or object. For instance, Ireland—which Julius Cæsar first called Hibernia—is a kind of modification of Erin, or the country of the west.

Scotland, from Scotia, is a tribe which originally came from Ireland. It was anciently called Caledonia, which means a mountainous country—forests (and lands.

Portugal, the ancied Luisitania, was so named from a town on the river Douro, called Cale, opposite to which the inhabitants built a city called Porto or Oporto. And when the country was recovered from the Moors the inhabitants combined the words and called it the kingdom of Portucale—hence Portugal.

Spain, the ancient Iberia, from the river Iberius, or Hispania, from the Phœnician Spaniga, which signifies abounding with rabbits, which animals are very numerous in that country—hence Spain.

France, from the Franks, a people of Germany, who conquered that country. Its ancient name was Celta, Gaul or Gallia-Bracchata, the latter signifying striped breeches, which were worn by the natives.

Switzerland, the ancient Helvetia, was so named by the Austrians, who called the inhabitants of these mountainous countries Schweitzers.

Italy received its present name from a renowned prince called Italius. It was called Hesperia, from its western locality.

Holland, the ancient Batavi, a warlike people, were so named from the German word hohl, the English of which is hollow, implying a very low country. The inhabitants are called Dutch, from the German deutsch or teutsch

Sweden and Norway were anciently called Scandinavia, which the modern antiquarians think mean a country the woods of which have been burnt or destroyed. The appellation Sweden is derived from Sictuna, or Suitheod. The native term Norway, or the northern way, explains itself.

Prussia, from Peuzzi, a Sclavonic race; but some writters suppose it took its name from Russia, and the Sclavonic syllable po, which means adjacent, or near.

Deumark means the marshes, territories or boundaries of the Danes.

Russia is the ancient Sarmatia, which has been subsequently named Muscovy. It derived its present name from Russi, a Sclavonic tribe who founded the Russian monarchy. The original savage inhabitants used to paint their bodies, in order to appear more terrible in battle. They generally lived in the mountains, and their chariots were their only habitations.

Turkey took its name from the Truks, or Turcomans, which signifies wanderers, and originally belonged to the Scythians or Tartars. It is sometimes called the Ottoman empire, from Othoman, one of their principal leaders.

Sweating Apples.

We hear much about "sweating" apples after they are gathered in the autumn. Farmers, and even agricultural papers of the better class, often allude to "sweat" on stored fruits as something that comes from within the fruit, and is to be regarded as a natural or necessary exudation. One of the best agricultural papers in the country, in a late issue, gives this advice to farmers and fruit-growers: "Apples intended for market should be gathered and laid in a pile on the ground for a week or more, so that they may sweat before barreling." Now, let us consider this matter for a moment. The skin of a sound apple is practically a protective covering, and designed for a two-fold purpose: first, to prevent the ingress of air and moisture to the tender cellular structure of the fruit; and, second, to prevent the loss of juices by exudation. There is no such process as sweating in fruits. When men or animals sweat, they become covered with moistnre passing through the skin; when an apple becomes covered with moisture, it is due to condensation of moisture, from without. Apples taken from trees in a cold day remain at the temperature of the air until a change to a higher temperature occurs, and then condensation of moisture from the warmer air circulating around the fruit occurs, just as moisture gathers upon the outside of an ice pitcher in summer. This explains the whole matter; and the vulgar notion of fruits "sweating" should be dispelled from the mind.

It is almost impossible to gather apples under such conditions of temperature that they will not condense moisture after being placed in barrels. It would be better if this result could be avoided, as dryness of fruit is essential to its protracted keeping.

Our autumns are characterized by changes from hot to cold, and these occur suddenly. The days are hot, and the nights cool, and this favors condensation. Apples picked on a moderately cool day, and placed in a moderately cool shed, protected from the sun, will not gather moisture, and this is the best method to pursue when practicable.—Popular Science News.

A Bully Beaten.

The English Sparrow is a bully, and is ready to run away the moment his antagonist shows a disposition to stand his ground. I saw this demonstrated yesterday morning. A pee-wee flycatcher, the first of the season—at least the first I have seen this season—perched his tiny self on a dead limb of an oak. An English sparrow, who had been quarreling with himself and the rest of the world since sunrise, made a rush at the little fly catcher. There was a scuffle in the air, a general shaking up, a chirp that sounded like a squeal. I suppose of course, that the fly-catcher had the worst of the riot, and I pitied him. He is no bigger than your thumb, and I expected to see him driven out of hearing. There were a scuffle, a squeal, and then rapid pursuit, but it was the sparrow that had turned tail, and the fly-catcher followed him, poping his bill as if it were a whip. The sparrow went under the house, and the fly-catcher returned to his perch and sat there as unconcernedly as if nothing had happened.

Clever Counterfeiters.

An official of the Secret Service department of the United States treasury at Washington has been showing an Inter-Ocean correspondent some specimens of the clever work done by counterfeiters. We quote from the correspondent's account:

"There's another that may interest you. It is a $5 National Bank note raised to $100. You see the figures and words are just as plain as though they were originally printed there. The 'raising' is very common. Here is a $1 raised to a $10, and a $2 to $20. The process is to erase entirely from the bill, by means of acids and other chemicals, whatever may be necessary to the change, and then to put in the new amendments by printing, or perhaps sometimes with a pen. Such bills do not often deceive men who are accustomed to handling money, because the body of the engraving on both face and back for the various denominations is entirely different. Now you can tell at a glance that this hundred is simply a $5 bill, and it is good for the amount at the bank of issue, or the treasury would issue a new $5 bill in its place. It is not a counterfeit. So that a $20 bill is good for $2, and the $10 for one. Such bills can only be passed upon persons not familiar with the different forms of our currency. This applies more particularly to the National Bank notes, as there is a much nearer approach to uniformity in the appearance of greenbacks. This $100 raise came into the treasury only last week.

"Here is a fifty-dollar bill that is another curiosity. It is not a counterfeit. Every bit of the paper and every line and letter of the printing are genuine."

"Then what is it here for?"

"If you will examine it very carefully you will see that it is wholly made up of pieces neatly pasted together. A man, say, takes twenty genuine bills and cuts out a different portion from each, the twenty pieces when put together making a complete bill. The defaced bills are restored by filling up the holes, and he has twenty-one bills instead of twenty, all of which are liable to pass without detection. The patchwork bill soon begins to show the seams, however. This way of making money involves a good deal of labor, and we see very few such bills."

He turned over the leaves of a large book filled with specimens of counterfeits of every description, good, bad and indifferent. Some would hardly deceive a "wayfaring man, though a fool," while others were marvels of skill."

Chinese Burial-Grounds.

As you walk round Shanghai you think that about half the land is waste. You fancy it is left, as large coverts and heather-clad heaths are left, where game preserving flourishes; but if you look closer, you see turf-covered mounds. It is a burial ground. Nowhere else in that neighborhood will you see a square yard of land that is not under tillage. Half our little wars with the Chinese came from trespassing on these cemeteries. The French at Shanghai had what threatened to be a big row when they wanted to drive a road through one of them. They are "taboo." Sometimes of an evening you may see a village elder walking round and explaining to the youngsters that their ancestors of a hundred years ago is buried here, and that five mounds off lies that happy father who was raised to the rank of marquis because his son came out first classic and senior wrangler in the final examination. I am speaking of an old burial-ground. In a new one you can see the solid, highly-varnished coffins (often carved) lying on the surface. There they are left for a year or two, after which they are thatched or bricked over, according to the wealth of the family, the result being a mausoleum like those sent to several of our royal family. This soon gets grown over with grass and weeds, and ends by becoming a mound, still hallowed in the recollection of the elders, still visited on anniversaries with the appointed offerings. The thing to remember is that in China all is above ground; there is no digging of grave; simply laying down of coffins and covering in by-and-by.

In old times they used to bury beside their dead gold and precious stones of all kinds. They are more economical nowadays; one remembers how they burn horses, and birds, and furniture, etc., cut out of gold or red paper, instead of the old offerings, which have grown too costly. In their present state of mind, the Chinese are not likely to take to cremation or to let their grave fields be desecrated by plow or spade; therefore they are bound to go in for sewage, and if our people out there want to make life pleasanter, let them try to get an imperial edict for deodorizing. Our residents cannot complain much about the unhealthiness of the present system. The Chinese are, on the whole, a healthy people.—All the Year Round.

"I wonder why I can't make my kite fly," wailed the little brother of the High School girl. "It looks to me," replied Mildred, "as though its caudal appendage were disproportionate to its superficial area." "I don't think that's it," said Jim. "I think its tail is too light."
